CONTACT WARTA JEMAAT

ST JOHN'S ANGLICAN CHURCH, CAMBERWELL
Pentecost 6—JUNE 26 2016

Dear Friends,

We gain our identity, belonging, and, to some extent, our security and protection from group identity, the collective. We are all born into some form of collective identity: whether that be the Westernised 'nuclear family, or the more ancient tribal extended family.

The religious development which took place during the 5th and 6th centuries Before the Common Era (BCE) in the Ancient Near East was the establishment of the collective as a divinely-oriented national structure – the People of Israel. The way of belonging to the people of Israel was by keeping 'the Law'. Adherence to Law ensured God's favour as the 'chosen'. Everything was sacrificed to this. This was the religious situation which, in spite of prophetic outbreaks over several centuries before his birth, prevailed at the time of Jesus. Jesus was born into this tribal identity, to an ethic dominated by group belonging, conformity to the collective.

Jesus' declared objective was not the rejection of the Law, but its fulfilment. So when he tells a would-be follower who wants first to bury his father, "Let the dead bury the dead", he's revealing the path to the kingdom of God. His statement – shocking to the group-minded everywhere – is a revelation, a revealing of the mystery of the kingdom. To enter the kingdom, it is necessary for the person to separate themselves from their group identity: from their tribe, clan, club, family, parents, nation state, ethnic grouping, even from the religious group. Any and every kind of collective identity will stand as an impediment to the person's capacity to enter the kingdom. This is a hard gospel for those committed to a religious institution.

What does true 'spirituality' look like? Its power can be observed in the life of the person who 'turns their face towards Jerusalem', which is the path of liberation from the collective-tribal identity - from the small and insecure identity shaped by external collective values, to the true identity which Jesus calls the 'kingdom within'. Jesus invites people to follow him, out of the small, legalistic identity shaped by group-think, to the true identity which can only be found by taking the 'Jerusalem' path.

It is obvious from this, then, that true spirituality is neither an intellectual exercise - a set of clever thoughts, propositions, or smooth-sounding arguments – nor the keeping of religious rules and regulations. Rather, Jesus teaches a way – his early followers were called the people of 'The Way' – the way of separation from false and superficial group identity, the way to true identity 'fit for the kingdom of God'.

With my love, David.
